DOMESTIC PARTNER HEALTH BENEFITS

~ Martha Burk

Illinois State University has joined a growing number of companies and universities in the country who are offering domestic partner health benefits. The changes will make coverage for married employees and domestic partner employees more equitable, according to President Al Bowman. "Diversity is one of the core values of Educating Illinois, our institution's action plan for distinctiveness and excellence," Bowman said. "This action sends a message to the entire campus community that Illinois State University provides a welcoming environment and a responsible environment for all employees."

Eligibility for health, dental and vision care insurance reimbursement will be determined by a Statement of Domestic Partnership provided to the Illinois State University Human Resources Office. The domestic partner may be of the same or opposite sex. The cost to the University for extending benefits is estimated at $35,000 per year. Illinois State already offers other domestic partner benefits such as tuition waivers, Family Medical Leave, sick leave use, the Wellness Program, Milner Library, and Recreation Services/Facilities.
